Tyler Davis Appointed to Arkansas Livestock & Poultry Commission

LITTLE ROCK, AR – Governor Asa Hutchinson recently appointed Tyler Davis of Ashdown to the Arkansas Agriculture Department's Livestock and Poultry Commission Board for a seven-year term.

Davis, a sixth generation farmer who has a hand in several areas of agriculture including cattle, row crops, poultry, and show pigs says that he is humbled and honored to be appointed to this position of extreme importance and will bring his talents to the commission's board.

"I will come to the table with an open mind, common sense, and will remain fair and impartial," said Davis. "I am ready to get to work and help to sustain and improve livestock and poultry in Arkansas."

He sees the work that the commission does as vital to the people of Arkansas and wants to make sure that his children see exactly how important that work is.

"I want my children to see what the commission does to improve the livestock and poultry industry," said Davis. "My hope is that my children and their generation won't have to deal with the hardships we faced because the commission has got us to the point of disease eradication and overall success."

Patrick Fisk, Director of the Livestock and Poultry Commission, believes that Davis will be a valuable asset to the commission as it promotes Arkansas livestock and poultry industries and maintains health and safety in the industry.

"We are privileged to have Mr. Davis on the commission and welcome his wealth of knowledge and experience in the industry," said Fisk. "He is well respected in the livestock industry and will be a valuable asset to the Commission."

The Arkansas Agriculture Department is dedicated to the development and implementation of policies and programs for Arkansas agriculture and forestry to keep its farmers and ranchers competitive in national and international markets while ensuring safe food, fiber, and forest products for the citizens of the state and nation.
